

Of interesting facts, we can say that at first many did not believe in the success of this film, and the director's chair was ceded to Chris Columbus. As a result, the film became one of the highest-grossing films at the time of 1990.

"Home Alone" is not only a good movie but also the beginning of an entire franchise, because after that 4 more sequels were made, however, it is the first part that is associated with the winter holidays. This movie is like a time capsule, which captures not only the atmosphere of the New Year but also the magic of the times when the movie was made.

Columbus has created a New Year's Eve moralistic comedy that is understandable without words. Ordinary things take on a new meaning, family values are shown through the example of the boy, and in the end, it ends with the victory over evil and the reunion of the main character with his family.
